NOTES FROM THE HOSTALIBRARY

This was the 22nd and final issue of Steve Greene's awesome and popular Hosta Finder. We have removed the prices as these may not be current, but it is still a valuable resource for those looking for less common plants.

The nurseries included may still be in business and may still have all the plants listed here. Also removed from this issue was an extensive list of business hours and open dates for all the nurseries involved, and purchase information for the Finder.

The Hosta Finder was a tremendous reference work in its time and we're happy to preserve this issue with Steve's blessing.

The Hosta Finder attempts to use correct spelling and nomenclature. However, the use of cultivar and species names in the finder does not indicate official acceptance of such names unless they are registered with the International Cultivar Registration Authority.

Carol & Bill,

The friendship plant has improved because of all your energy & kindness!

I would like to extend my gratitude and appreciation to Eloyse M. Healy and all the staff at CACDigital for 22 years of cooperation and advice in printing
the Hosta Finder.

I dedicate this book to my wife, Ruth, who has for 22 years been a sympathetic
ear and an advisor
for all the ups and downs
of the Hosta Finder.

It is with some sense of sadness that I announce that this will most likely be the last issue of the Hosta Finder. It has been an incredible run of cooperation between growers and collectors for 22 years. When I started this project most growers produced enticing catalogs, many in color, to whet the appetite of every gardener. As my yard filled up with plants, I wondered how I could still make use of these catalogs, and the Hosta Finder was born. I cut my teeth on the database, Filemaker Pro, in my teaching job, and the transition to using it for all my collections was a natural progression. I still believe that it offers more versatility for individuals and nurseries alike when cataloging collections or inventory.

Over the years the catalogs gave way to the internet. The development of resources like the Hosta Library and the AHS on line Registration database gave everyone access to the broad picture of the hosta world. Growers and nurseries developed web sites that easily guided new hostaphiles to great plants. At the same time, the homogenization of the available plants was well under way. Cultivars that were not tissue cultured continued to be rare, but the plants that went into TC were then offered by a multitude of sources. The great strength of the finder was the listing of hard to find cultivars.

The Hosta Finder was only as good as the growers and nurseries that contributed to the listing. Without their cooperation there would have been no basis for comparison and selective shopping. The fortunes of the finder were and are tied to trends in the gardening world. As gardens fill up with plants growers hope for a new generation of customers. Older gardeners face the dilemma of whether to hold onto historic cultivars or let them go in favor of the new and very exciting plants that are being hybridized. Membership in many plant societies is declining.

I wonder about a world in which many children don't see a parent out in the yard doing some gardening chores. In my neighborhood, more often than not, the lawn care service takes care of everything outdoors. Notice I did not call them landscapers as most of the companies are unimaginative in their approach to the yard. It drives me crazy when I see them piling bark mulch up against a tree which is sure to start the rotting of the base. In my own home nursery, my business is down by half because of the increase in deer and vole populations. Customers simply give up or move on to other plants.

It has been a good experience. My thanks to all the growers and nurseries that have participated over the years, to all the hosta societies and individual subscribers who have used the finder, and to the experts in the field who have helped solve nomenclature issues. I thank the American Hosta Society for their permission to use and publish the details of the Registration list in the Hosta Finder.

May you all have many more years of discovery and enjoyment from the friendship plant, the Genus Hosta.

Sincerely,

Steven H. Greene

Availability and Pricing

This list serves as a reference for distribution and pricing. Many newer varieties are sold out immediately after the grower's catalog is issued. Most growers have other cultivars which may be available by special request, particularly in late summer or fall.

Prices vary greatly and must be judged against the quality of plant one receives. In many cases what one pay for is what one gets. Higher prices may indicate just a nice big plant which will make a statement in your garden, an OS plant, relative newness of a cultivar, a slow increaser, a container shipped plant, or a variety which is simply in constant demand. Most growers do not indicate whether their plants originated in tissue culture. The limits of this list prohibit such distinction.

Ordering

This publication is not intended to replace the growers' catalogs or web sites. One should always write for a catalog or visit the web site to get the specifics on ordering and further details about each cultivar and other offerings such as streaked plants and other varieties not listed in the finder. The open house dates and retail hours are provided in the back of the book for those who may be traveling this summer.

Reading the List

Hosta name: Cultivars are capitalized and enclosed in single quotes; species are lower case and italicized.

Originator/Namer/Introducer/Registrant: Names are as listed in the AHS publications: The Genus Hosta, List of Registered Cultivars and The Genus Hosta, List of Registered Cultivars, Supplement 1 and The American Hosta Society's 1999 through 2014 registration booklets, or as credited by the grower. Mark Zilis' The Hostapedia has been particularly helpful in assigning credit for many unregistered cultivars. Kevin Walek and Warren I. Pollock continues to be helpful in making corrections and clarifying nomenclature issues. Unpublished changes in hosta registrations are not necessarily reflected in this list. Full responsibility for errors and misconceptions rests with the compiler. A year date indicates an officially registered hosta. NR indicates that the cultivar is not registered.

Size: Where possible height is listed in inches. Otherwise: mini, MN, M = mini; S = small; S-M = small medium M = medium; M-L = medium large; L = large; VL, Gi = very large. Growers differ somewhat on their definitions of each size's range. Sizes generally refer to the eventual height of the plant, not the plant's width. Many cultivars were registered before eventual mature plant height was known.

Leaf Color: bla = black; bl or blu = blue; blu-gre = blue green; ch or char = chartreuse; cr = cream; dk = dark; gra = gray; go or gol = gold; gra-gre = gray green; gr or gre = green; lm or li = lime; lt = light; or = orange; sil = silver; turq = turquoise; yel = yellow. Further abbreviation is sometimes necessary. e var = edge variegation (edge lighter than the center), m var = medio variegation (center is lighter than the edge), and s var = streaked, splotched, stippled, or spotted, etc. variegation. An u indicates that the variegation is unstable. A hyphen (-) indicates a color mix. A colon (:) indicates an overlay color. The use of > indicates viridescence or some other color change. The use of >< indicates that the color changes back later in the season to the spring color. No attempt is made to show blue-green changing to green or dark green.

Flower Color: Use of (-) indicates a blend of colors. Use of (/) indicates two colors, either striping or edging. No attempt is made to show striping of any overlay color as this is common and does not substantially change the appearance of the flower. b or bl = blue; bur = burgundy; cob = cobalt; cr = cream; d = dark or deep; l or la or lav = lavender (l is never used for light); li or lil = lilac; m or ma or mau = mauve; n = near; or or orc = orchid; p = light or pale, p only indicates purple in p/w or w/p or bl-p etc.; pi or pin = pink; pu or pur = purple; r = red; ro = rose; vi or violet = violet; w or wh or whi = white. Fragrant hosta are now indicated by "- f"; the list was compiled by Donald A. Rawson. Additional cultivar information is welcome.

Price: The listed single plant price is indicated. The lowest price is listed if a grower has more than one price for TC, OS, or larger sized plants. Display and sold out items are not listed. Some nurseries have special offers on groups of plants, quantities of one variety, or collections. Check a grower's catalog before ordering.

The Hosta Finder lists 4378 different plants this year. An amazing 1373 plants are listed by only one grower. A total of 712 plants are listed by 2 growers, 431 plants are listed by 3 growers; 304 plants are listed by 4 growers; 244 plants are listed by 5 growers. A total of 1134 plants are listed as edge variegated; 564 plants are listed as medio variegated. A total of 395 plants are listed as having streaking, spotting, or other unusual markings. Of these 81 cultivars are listed as unstable, though that number should most likely be higher. A total of 648 plants are listed as green; 508 plants as blue-green, and 573 plants have gold or yellow or both in their description. A total of 366 plants are listed as having pure white flowers while another 597 plants are listed with near white flowers. A total of 125 plants are listed as having fragrant flowers. This count is low as fragrance was not always properly recorded in the database.

SOME THOUGHTS ABOUT MY JOURNEY WITH THE HOSTA FINDER:

When I started the Hosta Finder 22 years ago, I was mostly taking information from printed catalog sources. In the early days I would usually have to completely delete the previous list for a grower and then enter a new list. Gradually I was able to get growers to give me three operations separately so that I could retain the list from the year before and enter deletions, price changes, and additions in an orderly manner. This greatly facilitated my ability to keep up from year to year. And working directly on their electronic lists on my large screen computer surely beat flopping around in the catalogs.

In the daylily world, the name of the hybridizer travels with the name of the cultivar in most instances. It gives the collector some bearing and orientation about the nature of the plant and its originating location. When I studied hosta catalogs, I found that often the credits were not listed. Some nurseries have always been good about listing credits; others tended to not list the originator. It is fair to say that credits for daylilies usually involve only one name, whereas the ONIR registration system for hosta makes the listing of full credits less convenient. Nevertheless, I felt that one of the strengths of the Hosta Finder was the listing of all credits where known.

Fast forward to the internet and the websites. We are back to where we started. The five websites I visited to see if I could find credit for H. 'Angel Falls' failed to reveal such information. Finally I thought to check in at Walters Gardens, Inc. where I found the answer. Until a hosta is registered there is no public record for all to see. In many instances the introduction of new hosta races ahead of the registration process. In the daylily world registrations almost always precede the introduction of a new cultivar.

I have always encouraged the registration of all hosta. In addition to your current introduction, I hope many would continue the work of Peter Ruh, Mark Zilis, and others to reach back and register older cultivars.

The other struggle in the early days of compiling the finder was trying to standardize spellings. Oh my gosh.....there was a lot of discrepancy in the way names were spelled in the catalogs. And in those days, more than half the hosta offered on the market were not registered. But even if they were registered, there were still errors in the catalogs. Over time I massaged and provided feedback to growers which helped standardize the spellings.

But errors still exist in the Hosta Finder. The other day I was trying to find data for a bunch of hosta offered by at least one grower for which I had no credits. One hosta listed with no credits was Sky Rocket. Hmmm.....turns out it is Bob Kuk's H. 'Skyrocket'. I am very suspicious when entering new names off grower lists, but somehow this one slipped through. I just checked and the error only appeared in 2014 and 2015. For many years Peter Ruh, Warren Pollock and others would help me with corrections. I could not have done this finder before the electronic age; so many growers have responded quickly by e-mail to my questions.

Steve

The following hand out is given to visitors to our garden which is twenty miles west of Boston. The garden is surrounded by typical suburban landscape, though our zoning is 3/4 to 1 acre building lots. Some of my practices, particularly about mosquito control, work in this setting, but may not work in gardens surrounded by woods, vernal pools, and other wetlands. We thought you might enjoy a bit of our garden chatter.

About Daylilies

Daylilies will tolerate a wide range of conditions, but they thrive in well drained soil which has been amended with organic matter. The growth rate and blooming display increase with more direct sunlight. A minimum of 4 to 5 hours of sun is recommended for a nice show. The pH should be about 6.0 to 6.4; use dolomite limestone if raising the pH as daylilies like the magnesium. An inch of rain or watering per week in season will promote excellent color, more blooms, good increase, and perhaps a rebloom scape here and there. A general garden fertilizer sprinkled around the base of each plant in the spring does wonders. I prefer a 6 week slow release fertilizer. Do not fertilize after August 1. Daylily clumps should be lifted every 4th or 5th year after the blooming season. Cut up the clump and replant a smaller clump of 4 to 6 fans in a refreshed soil after trimming off half of the leaf height. Spring dividing can be done quite effectively also when the fans are about 6 inches high. Keep in mind that the flowering scapes will be shorter than normal on spring divided plants the first year. Registered season and Sudbury season can be a bit different. E = June; EM = late June to July 4; M = July 4 to July 20; ML = late July into August; L = strong August bloomer; VL = mid August to Labor Day and after. I generally do not dig daylilies during the bloom season. We have two huge sales a year, one in April and May and again in late August. I line the driveway with pots, put pictures on the wall, and publish a database list of plants.

A Few Hosta Notes

At the risk of preaching to the choir, I offer a few observations about my hosta growing. Mildred Seaver always said, "give hosta light". Most of the hosta at Greene Acre thrive in at least some direct sunlight. Lack of water is usually the reason that leaves start to fry. If a hosta is not thriving, move it! The regression in size is usually due to root competition, especially from maples, tulip poplar, locust, and most evergreens. I usually divide the large hosta when the spikes first emerge. I can see where to make my cuts with an old carpenter saw and the double eyes present well in pots. By not digging the entire clump, the remainder goes on growing without much size regression. I propagate much of my medium and small stock the same way, but it can be done anytime. On medium fast growers I often dig the whole clump, but only divide it into four pieces. I find no vigor is lost and the new cut pieces take right off again. I like to finish all my propagating and moving of plants by mid summer.

I have never found the time to become a serious deliberate hybridizer. I do let hosta seed germinate in the garden, and a few interesting seedlings are being evaluated for possible vanity registration. But when I see the terrific new plants coming onto the market, I gladly defer to the experts. Two examples that stand out in our garden are Don Dean's H. 'Silver Bay' and Bill Meyer's H. 'Luna Moth'.

A Vole in the Hole

With all due respect to the cage builders, since I maintain a propagation and selling garden, I had to find a different solution for the vole problem.

Many years ago I dug a series of post holes for a new fence and left them for a few days. One morning I noticed this plump dark furry creature at the bottom of one of the holes. Little did I know that I had trapped the culprit that girdled my new fruit trees the previous winter of deep snow.

A year ago I sustained major vole damage to evergreens and daylilies in front of the fence. Strange...as I had never seen voles girdle evergreen shrubs. I was very discouraged, and then I remembered the post holes. What if I bought some 6" diameter PVC pipe and buried it in the ground so the top would be flush with the ground, and then put a brick on each side raised a bit and cover with a piece of flagstone? To entice the varmints, I smeared peanut butter on the side of the tube half way down. Well!!! Two days later I had 3 voles in the hole with no way to escape. They became vole mincemeat.

Since then, I have constructed 15 sleeves and occasionally I find a carcass or the last of the dermestid beetles at the bottom of the tube. My tubes are 13" deep; I might increase the depth a bit more on the next set. Every winter, the tubes will frost heave up a couple of inches. Simply hammer the tube back down flush with the ground and reset the side bricks and the cover. I am too lazy to put peanut butter in the tubes, and yet they continue to do the job without a lot a labor. I suspect that when a vole is frightened it heads for cover and down the tube.

Tips: Do not be too quick to kill the 1st vole in the hole. When left alone it will call its buddies into the hole. The peanut butter does increase the trapping rate. The tubes are random control, so placement in strategic beds is important. The more tubes, the better. They simple fade into the garden scape and are hardly noticeable. I am now putting hardware cloth on the bottom of the tube to prevent a lower escape.

I tried every type of vole bait system over the years. I started with bait bags in two inch PVC pipe. It worked, but the voles would drag the rest of the bait bag out where birds would eat the pellets and die. Then I put chunk bait in plastic jars with a one inch hole drilled in the top and mounted on a stake and pounded into the ground to where the hole was flush with the ground. It seemed effective until the voles would drag the smaller pellet out of the jar and again the bait would poison birds. I now rely on the sleeves in the ground. I will occasionally stuff loose vole bait down a likely hole when I am weeding. I figure that the birds will not find the bait, though pets probably would.

Mosquitoes and Lemon Joy

If one googles mosquitoes and soap or detergent, the first page will discourage the further pursuit of such folly. But then some positive comments start to appear in response to some articles. The verdict is far from clear, but I have been finding success.

I put out 50 small pails with water and ultra joy (lemon) detergent. I have never been precise about the amount of detergent to put in the water. A few squirts in a half filled 5 gallon bucket is enough. The half filled allows for drought and rain. The theory is that the mosquitoes come to drink and go off and die. And mosquitoes try and lay eggs in the soapy water, but the eggs never hatch which breaks the breeding cycle. This may work because many species of mosquitoes are very local in their distribution. I asked a mosquito expert about this and he offered that it may very well work for some species, but not for others.

This has been my most successful year to date, as I got the pails set up in early April. I have very few mosquitoes come up in my face, even down in the pines. If I kick the pot stacks in the storage corner, hardly any mosquitoes rise into the air. Keep the pots going until November.

Downsides: The soap has to be renewed about 5 times during the growing season. I leave the pails until late October. If the pail is subject to lots of rain and sprinkler action, then emptying half the water and adding more detergent must be done more often. I suspect that this system would not work for a garden surrounded by deep woods with vernal pools and moist conditions. My garden is surrounded by typical suburbia. Some of this results may be circumstantial. We had an early dry month which may have broken the breeding cycle for many species. On the other hand, I can go into my neighbor's garden in the evening and the mosquitoes come right up in my face.

It is easy to lose track of where all the pails are; the missing pails can become part of the problem when the water is dilute enough for breeding. So I am now going to reduce to about 25 larger containers kept visible and recorded on a map so I can keep track of all of them. the 5 gallon buckets work well in the brush along 3 sides of my property. Along the front fence I still use small blue paint buckets which hide under plants. This is my third year of using this control method, and I am convinced that it is working in my situation.

I hate deer flies in July. Guess what? Put lemon joy straight in small yellow containers like jar tops and you will soon see the dead flies head down in the detergent. And no more deer flies buzzing the head!

Oh, for a Good Oak

I have checked with several tree nursery people, and my theory is correct. New Englanders don't buy oaks. In fact New Englanders don't know about really good, sturdy, long lived oaks. When I ask gardeners about this, they say that the woods are full of oaks; why should I bring one into my garden? And aren't oaks a nuisance with their acorn crop? I suspect that this culture started with the great expansion of the suburbs. Everyone wanted fast growing trees; oaks were too slow growing. And New Englanders did want to bring that colorful sugar maple right onto their property. So we are stuck with maples (most of them that messy silver maple) and a whole array of "junk" trees which have been shedding and falling all around us for a generation.

I love to garden all day long under an oak which has a deep tap root. An open grown oak takes on a form and grace for several generations. Ah, give me a chestnut oak, a post oak, a pin oak, a bur oak, and even a native white oak. I do love those white oaks on Cape Cod which twist and turn as they are shaped by the winds. I do not miss the large Norway type maple that dominated the front yard. The volunteer red oak in front of the house is a great improvement.

Hydrangeas

I'm reading! I'm reading! I got drawn in by endless summer, but the full story is much more complicated. I suspect that many cultivars are just on the edge of survivability for zone 5.

Plenty of foliage, but the old wood dies off, and thus no blooms. Have fun and experiment is all I can say. I grow 'Lady in Red'. I thought it was named for its red flowers. It turns out that it was named for the red leaf stalks (sound familiar?). And after a year of miracid the blooms are now a pale blue.

The downside is that I take the health of my plants very personally. The hydrangeas are always drooping in the sun, but they respond quickly to a good soak. My next planting will be done a bit differently. Instead of pushing a $50 plant into a $10 hole, I am going to take the time to excavate all that glacial till down 18 inches and bring in the best organic material I can find. Moisture retention is a must.

I am still learning. Now that my hydrangeas are five years old, they no longer droop on a hot day. The roots must be well enough established to maintain hydration. But they are still a great indicator when the soil starts to dry out very deeply.

Did you ever notice that ferns never give much warning of dry soil. Walk by one day and everything seems fine. The next day the fern is a frizzled mess and done for the year. I have learned to recognize a dulling of the leaf color as a warning sign on many ferns.

Tomatoes

We think we finally have the tomato culture right. Start with sturdy healthy looking plants from a local source (no big box stores!!!). Good nurseries now start most tomatoes in individual 3" pots. Buy several different types. It is not worth buying seed packs as you will have less variety and indoors the plants get too leggy. The older varieties taste better; the newer ones bring other traits such as early maturation. 'Fourth of July' really does mature by July 4 if our tips are followed. Pot them up one size and keep above ground where the warmth will promote root growth. If you put a tomato in cold soil, it will just sit there. Always bury some of the stem so the roots will not dry out. We like the cylinder cages. Plan the layout leaving plenty of space between rows. Ruth says I always end up putting the two rows too close together. Now that the planning is done, HERE IS THE KEY. Place the plants and before the cages are put in place, mulch out 3 feet with salt marsh hay, straw, or clean pine needles. This will prevent the normal blight like condition starting on the lower leaves. The blight comes from the soil being splashed onto plants during rain. Eventually, the bottom of the plants may start looking tired, but hopefully not until mid August or later.

We don't have the space to do successive plantings of vegetables. We found that planting cucumbers at the end of June gave us a great August crop which lasted into September and there are no cucumber beetles. By waiting to plant the summer squash a bit later seems to avoid the squash beetles. Some basil, a few peppers, and the herbs round out our efforts these days. The bunnies love the broccoli. The deer love the swiss chard which we do like to grow. We enjoy supporting four farmers markets.

Happy gardening, Ruth and Steve
